Racketeer's Deportation

NEW ORLEANS—A federal judge says the Immigration and Naturalization Service must reconsider attempts to deport reputed racketeer Carlos Marcello because its handling of the case displayed the "worst sort" of "callous disregard for ethical standards."

INS officials have been trying to deport Marcello since 1953 on the basis of a 1938 marijuana conviction. On Friday, District Court Judge Jack Gordon vacated a 1961 deportation order until the INS holds further hearings in Washington.

Gordon's ruling came on Marcello's appeal that INS authorities used a false birth certificate to deport him to Guatemala in 1961.
